

Knowledge Management for Development Journal

Call for Papers for non-thematic issue

Volume 8, Issue No. 2, September 2012

The Knowledge Management for Development Journal (KM4D Journal) is a peer-reviewed community based journal on knowledge management for development – for and by development practitioners, researchers and policymakers. The journal is closely related to the KM4Dev community of practice at www.km4dev.org

For more information about the journal, kindly consult the journal website at <http://www.tandf.co.uk/journals/titles/19474199.asp> or join the Ning group on KM4Dev at <http://www.km4dev.org/group/km4djournal>

Volume 8, Issue 2, to be published in September 2012, will be a non-thematic issue. We are looking for articles, including research papers, case studies and short ‘community notes’ which have a knowledge management component and relate to international development. Development in this specific context relates to such topics as aid/assistance to developing countries, international cooperation and poverty alleviation. Examples of sub-sectors are health, agriculture, education, gender empowerment, policy issues, and so forth. A fuller definition of development can be found below¹.

We would like to include practice-based cases, analysis and research concerning the role of knowledge in development processes. This might include knowledge management within an organisation, from small community-based organisations to large multilateral ones; knowledge process with the grassroots; and description and analysis of knowledge networks. We are also interested in cross-fertilisation from other fields and, in particular, approaches that throw light on the development sector-wide knowledge ecology.

Submissions deadlines

Submission to http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/rkmd	30 April 2012
Peer review completed	15 May 2012
Final version of paper submitted	15 June 2012
Publication date	September 2012

If you have any questions about the relevance of a possible paper, kindly contact the Editorial team at km4djournal@gmail.com

Guidelines for authors are available on the journal’s website at <http://www.tandf.co.uk/journals/journal.asp?issn=1947-4199&linktype=44>

For an example of a paper for format (including layout, abstract, email of contributors, and notes on contributors, references), kindly consult the following paper on the KM4Dev Ning group: <http://www.km4dev.org/group/km4djournal/forum/topics/making-innovation-systems-work-in-practice-published-in-km4d>

Sarah Cummings, Ewen le Borgne, Ivan Kulis, Lucie Lamoureux and Denise Senmartin
Knowledge Management for Development Journal

Current site: <http://www.tandfonline.com/loi/rkmd20>
Archive site: <http://journal.km4dev.org/index.php/km4dj>

¹ Development is understood to be a process involving a broad palette of human factors, concerned with individual people living in very different conditions across the world. As such, development efforts are aimed at strengthening people's abilities to respond to the challenges they encounter in their environment at individual, family, community and wider societal levels. It is a process of empowerment of marginalized people, which involves the transfer, development and leveraging of knowledge in such a way that they are better informed of their personal development possibilities and livelihood opportunities, and better equipped to capitalize on these. From this perspective, development initiatives can succeed only if there is a thorough understanding of the cultural and socio-economic environment of the intended beneficiaries: development depends to a large extent on how well knowledge of these factors is applied.